The Hawkl ine

Fall 1996

KU CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGY NEWS

WITCH VISIT

Kudos

The mother in law of the student at the University of Kansas was visiting the campus for the first time. She was very impressed with the beautiful campus and the architecture of the buildings. The student was thrilled to show her around and introduce her to the rest of the family.

The mother in law was very excited to see the new campus and was amazed by the how it had changed since the last time she visited. She was particularly impressed with the new dormitories and the student center.

The student's family was very proud to show off their son and the university that he represented. They were all thrilled to have the mother in law visit and to share their love for the university with her.
These changes are central to the program's goal of addressing the needs of children and families through a comprehensive approach that includes psychological and educational services. The program is designed to provide support and intervention for children who may be facing challenges in their emotional or behavioral development. The Center for Child and Family Development is a key component of this approach, offering a range of services to address the diverse needs of children and their families.

The program is funded by a combination of federal, state, and private sector grants, as well as contributions from individuals and organizations. This funding enables the Center to provide services to children and families regardless of their ability to pay.

The Center's mission is to improve the well-being of children and families through research, education, and clinical services. By offering a range of services, the Center is able to address the needs of children from birth through adulthood, and to support their families in providing the best possible care.

The Center's vision is to be a leader in the field of child and family development, providing innovative research and educational programs that are grounded in the latest scientific knowledge. By partnering with other organizations and institutions, the Center is able to bring a wide range of expertise to bear on the challenges facing children and families in the 21st century.
Faculty Sampers:

Faculty Sampers:

Dear Faculty and Staff:

We are pleased to announce the launch of the new website for the Department of Psychology. The website, www.personalpsychology.com, is available to all members of the psychology community.

The website includes a variety of resources for faculty and students, including:

- Up-to-date news and announcements
- Publications and research papers
- Teaching resources
- Professional development opportunities
- Student resources

We encourage all faculty and staff to visit the website and explore the resources available.

Thank you for your support of the Department of Psychology.

Sincerely,

[Signature]

Chair, Department of Psychology

---

Student Sampers:

Dear Students,

We are pleased to announce the new website for the Department of Psychology. The website, www.personalpsychology.com, is available to all members of the psychology community.

The website includes a variety of resources for students, including:

- Up-to-date news and announcements
- Publications and research papers
- Teaching resources
- Professional development opportunities
- Student resources

We encourage all students to visit the website and explore the resources available.

Thank you for your support of the Department of Psychology.

Sincerely,

[Signature]

Dean, College of Arts and Sciences
On the other hand, this wonderfully wonderful time, the first day of school, was such a wonderful time. The first day of school was such a wonderful time. The first day of school was such a wonderful time. The first day of school was such a wonderful time. The first day of school was such a wonderful time.